WHEELING, W. VA., DECEMBER 27, 1882.

On to Washington.

From the day of Dr. Updegraff's death Colonel Taylor has seemed to be the Republican favorite for the succession. The result of yesterday's convention proves that appearances were not misleading. Other candidates were supported with spirit and determination, but all through the day Taylor was the strong probability.

The balloting was unnecessarily prolonged, but the contest was conducted in a spirit of friendly rivalry and concluded with a harmony and enthusiasm which leave little to comfort the Democrats of the district, who have been depending on irreconcilable division in the convention and disastrous division in the campaign. No candidate was denied his fair and equal chance. No unworthy effort was made to influence the result. The nomination is the mature judgment of an intelligent and honorable body of men as ever came together for a like purpose. The convention had its own way and spoke its own will. It was fortunate to have material so good to select from, and not less so in the choice it made.

The nominee starts with many advantages into a campaign on which he had already entered as a reasonable certainty. He is well known through the district, and he knows the district, its interests and its wants. He has a large circle of strong friends who will make special effort for him. His active friends in the convention bore themselves so well in their persistent support of him that they gave no offense and opened the way for the hearty burrah which greeted the motion to give him an unanimous nomination.

By reason of his fidelity to the party, his ability and sterling character, Colonel Taylor deserves and will receive the cordial support of his party. He will defeat Mr. Alexander not only because he deserves to, but not only because the party deserves success, but because the Republicans of the district will achieve a victory by working for it. Our friends over the river can not afford to let their splendid district fall into Democratic hands, and nobody so fully appreciates this as themselves. A fair tariff for protection is the bedrock of their prosperity, and they will not trust their interests to a party which is the avowed enemy of protection, however much its candidates may seek to disguise its horrid shape in protection districts.

PERSONAL.

Perry Belmont proposes to resume his active connection with the turf next year.

Miss Maud Howe, who was called "the beautiful Maud" in Paris in 1878, is now the guest of Mr. Blaine in Washington.

Sara Bernhardt is said to have signed a contract to play an engagement of twenty-two weeks in the United States next season.

President Gilman, of Johns Hopkins university and ex-Mayor Latrobe have started a Longfellow Memorial association in Baltimore.

There is a rumor that Mary Anderson intends to take a long course of study under Mr. Ryder, the veteran English actor, next year.

Mr. Justice Blatchford has bought several building lots "convenient" to his Washington residence and is going to treat himself to a big flower garden.

Albert Bierstadt, the artist, and Edward Fawcett, the litterateur, have been visiting the President. Between Mr. Bierstadt and President Arthur there exists a warm personal friendship of long standing.

Mr. William D. Howells' literary work is severely dealt with in the January Blackwood's Magazine, and it is said that Howells and James' will be handled with greater severity in the forthcoming Quarterly.

The Mexican minister's receptions have a little of the splendor of the Spanish court on State occasions. Madame Romero has already arrived at Washington, unattended by her husband, but followed by a numerous suite.

Tom Ochiltree has been making a triumphal march to Washington. St. Louis gave him a supper of humming bird brains and nightingale tongues, with wine exhumed from the scoria which buried Hercules 1,800 years ago.

The Secretary of War has ordered the commanding officer at St. Augustine, Fla., to allow Col. Percier of the French army to place a marble tablet in front of the old chapel at Fort Marion in commemoration of the successful observation of the transit of Venus by the officers of the French army.

Bob Burdette was advertised to lecture recently at St. John's, Va. There had been a religious revival, and "a committee" begged Burdette not to interfere with the cause by his jokes. So he threw up his prepared lecture and substituted an impromptu effort which is said to have been sufficiently solemn.

BREAKFAST BUDGET.

White Ottoman satin is the newest fabric for bridal dresses.

The first shad from the St. John river, Florida, have been taken.

The tenth wife of a Mormon tailor has very little husband to talk about.—New Orleans Picayune.

The inundations of Verona have destroyed the greater part of a large collection of prehistoric antiquities unearthed by Signor Stefani.

Nickel is proposed to be a substitute for bronze in coinage in France. It is also suggested that the new coins shall be octagonal instead of round, so that the people may not mistake them for silver in the hurry of business.

In a Massachusetts village the hens of the Roman Catholic priest lay their eggs in the barn of the pastor of the Congregational Church, thus establishing a fellowship between two clergymen of widely different beliefs.

Some English chemists and sanitary reformers have started a movement to make bread from the entire grain of wheat, and not from the inner portion only. The movement has the support of the first physiologists of the day.

One of the new shades of color is called "terra-cotta." The unfettered dressmakers, in ordering it, spell it "terra-caught-her," and considering what a sickly yellow it is, we do not know but that they are justified, under the circumstances.—Boston Advertiser.

The largest salmon taken in the Tweed this year with a rod and line weighed 60 pounds. This is thought to have been the biggest Scotch salmon of the century. Yare, however, in his "British Fishes" states that the Earl of Hare once took a salmon with a rod, the fish weighing 604 pounds.

"It is a great art to do the right thing at the right time." The person subject to derangement of the kidneys or liver has a protective duty to perform in purchasing a package of Kidney-Wort. It invigorates these organs and by its cathartic and diuretic effect, cleanses the whole system of all bad humors.
